

Benchly, then writing for Newsweek, chartered Mundus and the crew of the Criquet II. The rest as they say is history. Today, far from the familiar lighthouses and windswept beaches of the Mid-Atlantic coastline, Mundus lives a quiet life with his wife Jenny in Naalho, Hawaii.

However, anglers interested in shark fishing with the same man that led famous bluewater angler Donnie Braddick to the monster 3,427-pound white shark he caught off New York in 1986, will have their chance this

“Anglers interested in shark fishing with the same man that led famous bluewater angler Donnie Braddick to the monster 3,427-pound white shark he caught off New York in 1986, will have their chance this June.”

June. For a very brief period, Mundus is coming out of retirement and booking five-man shark charters aboard the legendary Criquet II. The classic 1946 custom Tiffany is a vessel unique to the entire world. Veteran offshore big-game specialist Captain Joe DiBella, who will accompany Mundus on the encore voyages, now owns the boat. I recently had the pleasure of speaking with the colorful Mundus and he regaled with his epic tales of the sea and its formidable denizens.

“This time I’ll act as mate or advisor,” said Mundus. “That way, when anyone asks for the Captain I can just point at Joe and say that’s him!” he exclaimed laughing.

Always the prankster, he then added that he is looking forward to visiting his old haunts and aggravating his old friends. For some lucky anglers this is a chance of a lifetime. Anglers interested in booking a charter should contact Mundus now because the trips are booking fast. Mundus can be contacted at fmundus.com for available dates. Who knows, maybe you will be the person who tops Braddick’s fish, which incidentally, is the largest fish of any kind ever taken on a rod and reel.
